One of the most critical considerations for many young start-up companies is having a working environment that matches both the aspirations of client and workforce alike. Operating within an extremely tight budget, Fleet advised media planning agency, Trinity Communications, on developing a small office space in London's West End into fashionable modern offices to house their future expansion.

Advising the reuse/ modification of existing fixtures and fittings, such as glazed screens and lighting; and the strategic purchase and subsequent fabrication of second hand furniture to create mobile storage screens, Trinity now have a flexible combination of permanent, and moveable partitions that can be rearranged to suit their day-to-day requirements.
